Iron Ore Lands Purchased.

(From the St. Louis Republic.)
Purchase made recently by three St. Louisans, representing Eastern and Northern iron furnace owners, of the mines and vast areas of iron ore lands in St. Francois and Iron counties, Missouri, for almost half a century operated successfully by the old Iron Mountain Company of St. Louis, is looked upon by those interested in the iron trade of the St. Louis industrial district as the surest evidence that the organization of the great independent steel-producing plants into a second organization resembling the United States Steel Corporation has created a demand on the part of the independents for ore land leases wherever they be obtained and has brought an extensive speculative movement in the ownership of such lands.

The sale of the 17,000 acres of the old Iron Mountain Company to the Superior Iron and Furnace Company of St. Louis was followed by the purchase of 30,000 acres of proved iron ore land in Wayne County, Missouri, along the Iron Mountain Railroad between Keener and Poplar Bluff. Part of the tract is in Butler County. The purchase was made in the name of the Radium Iron Company of Chicago, which is said to be under contract to furnish raw ore to the syndicate which recently planned to open the Iron Mountain iron furnace in South Chicago as an independent producer of pig iron.

THIRD COMPANY BUYS TRACT.
Still another company composed of St. Louisians about the same time closed a deal for a 400-acre tract of ore-bearing land adjoining almost on the north the property of the Radium Iron Company. This concern was incorporated as the Ozark Iron and Furnace Company.

All three organizations have plans for development, the only difference being in the volume of output. All are agreed in the purpose of erecting and operating cold-blast charcoal furnaces to reduce the highest grades of ore. Cold-blast charcoal iron is made only in three or four places in the country—Hanging Rock and Ironton, Ohio, and Glen, Pa., while the first plant established in the country, more than 130 years ago, at New Canaan, Conn., still is in operation.

The price of this iron has not varied more than $5 from $40 a ton in 30 years. It is used in the production of steel for ordnance and tool making and for the making of the chilled steel rolls necessary in all of the rolling mills of the country. Recently automobile manufacturers in various cities have been using some of the expensive iron in making automobiles parts—not bodies or heavy parts.

TO PRODUCE HIGH-GRADE ORE.
The three companies recently organized to operate in Southeast Missouri have made furnace provisions for an output of 75 tons a day of the high-grade iron. All of them have submitted proposals to furnace owners and steel users of other cities and to prospective operators of blast furnaces in St. Louis, for the furnishing of unlimited quantities of iron ore known in the market as No. 1. In the Southeast Missouri counties No. 1 ore runs from 65 per cent to 82 per cent metallic iron. It is desired by sheet-steel makers of the St. Louis district to mix with lake or Northern ore.

In his office in the Syndicate Trust building yesterday C. A. Burton, one of the members of the new Superior Iron and Furnace Company, which purchased the old Iron Mountain property, said the new company has a paid-up capital of $200,000 and that $257,000 had been paid for the property.

FORTY MEN ALREADY EMPLOYED.
"Within the next four months," he said, "we will construct a 10-ton furnace on the switch track of the Iron Mountain Railroad that skirts our property. Within six months we will be making iron. We have 40 men at work cutting wood for charcoal with which to smelt the iron and will mine only what iron we use in our own furnace and what is bought from us by other furnaces."

"We get our ore, limestone, smelting fuel and water power on our own property in unlimited quantities and it will therefore cost us virtually 50 per cent less to manufacture this high-grade iron than is paid by other companies in the East and we are just as close to the central markets as the Eastern mills."

"Our plant will employ about 60 men regularly, not counting miners, who will be employed as needed in mining ore for outside furnaces. Our water power comes from a 320-acre lake on top of our mountain and our company plans to have a hotel and summer resort at that lake. All of our plans together will furnish one-fourth of the population of a city of 2,000 inhabitants which we expect to see at Iron Mountain within three years."

DECLARES DEPOSITS ARE LARGE.
With regard to the freely circulated report that the iron ore deposits on the property had been exhausted by the old company, Mr. Burton said: "We made the purchase chiefly on the reports of the Missouri State Geologist in 1912, after that department had proved over the whole of the Iron Mountain property by drilling tests. That report states there is remaining in one of the tunnel drifts run by the old company more than 300,000 tons of as good ore as the old company ever mined. That is more ore than the old company ever reduced in any one year of its operations. We can crush and ship for several years from the ore banks left by the old company."

"The State Geologist's survey revealed numerous veins of iron ore from 7 to 74 feet in thickness, leading off from various pits, from which ore was taken in virgin purity by the old company. At the end of the chief working of the old company a wall of porphyry was encountered and thro' that curtain the vein continues in solid No. 1 grade iron 32 feet thick."

IRON PRICES CLIMBING.
"James J. Hill said publicly two years ago that the extent of the iron deposits in North America are known and that iron, at the then rate of consumption, would be among the precious metals in 1950. Since then events have conspired rather to force this country into supplying and manufacturing a much greater percentage of the world product than ever before and no new fields have been discovered. It is our belief that iron ore never again will be as cheap as it was when Mr. Hill made his prediction in 1913."

"The development in Southeast Missouri portends a vast increase in the industrial field and in employment in all branches of the iron trade in the whole of the St. Louis industrial district. St. Louis by reason of its location near to such great deposits of iron ore, should be the center of the independent producers' operations, both as to pig iron and all of the manufactures of iron."

Militarism vs. Democracy.

"Democracy had progressed to such an extent in Europe that it was necessary for monarchial parties to have a war, or change their methods of government." So says Dr. John W. Slaughter, of the University of London, who is a native of Alabama and now lives in England. That is the view that was expressed by many Americans when the war broke out more than a year ago.

Dr. Slaughter says that many persons in this country do not understand the great progress that has been made in social democracy in Europe—and he might have said that most Americans do not understand it; and that this is particularly true of England. "Through popular education, socialism, trades-unionism and co-operative societies," he says, "the common people of England have been taught what their rights are and how they can secure them."

Of course, the privileged classes—including the great land-owners who perform no services, yet have vast incomes from ground rents—have, as Dr. Slaughter points out, watched the growth of the democratic idea in Great Britain with alarm, just as the privileged classes in America have watched with much alarm the growth of the democratic idea in this country. And here, as in Great Britain and in Germany, militarism is "peculiarly the function of the ruling classes."

"When the opportunity was presented of engaging in wars without, or of facing difficulties within," as Dr. Slaughter puts it, Germany declared war, Austria declared war, Russia declared war and Great Britain declared war—for the common people to fight and pay for. That easily and naturally and correctly accounts for the efforts of men of special privileges in this country to create a military spirit here.

The political and economic problems at home are easily forgotten when a nation is at war, or is busy getting ready to fight a real or an imaginary foe. It is easy for the People to forget and turn aside from their political and economic troubles when calculating, secondarily conspirators have cultivated hatred for some nation. The People will not willingly bear the expenses of huge, costly military and naval establishments unless they have been taught to fear and then hate their brothers of some other nation.

The interests—the war trust and the whole brood of special privilege—in this country are alarmed for fear that some of their privilege, their power to take tribute from the people, will be taken from them, and it should be taken from them. Hence the demand for "preparedness."

Further, as Dr. Slaughter points out, the British Tories would like to see enforced military service "as a basis for the future, for imposing militarism as an adjunct of the ruling classes." So American Tories—holders of special privileges, owners of millions they have not earned—want enforced military service in this country. That is one of the things desired by the jingoes, by the war trust, by all those who in the name of "preparation for war in order to maintain peace" would Prussianize America. The privileged classes of Europe do not expect to pay for this war. They do expect to saddle the whole debt upon the plain people. So it is with the privileged classes of America, who are willing to saddle upon working people the huge cost of battleships and great armies. They would have the common people fight all battles and pay all the cost of preparedness and all the cost of the result of preparedness—war.—San Francisco Star.

G. W. Buford Goes to Ohio.

(Bonne Terre Register.)
George W. Buford, the popular Prudential Insurance agent, has been transferred from the local field to a debit in Columbus, the capital of the state of Ohio. Mr. Buford is selling out his real estate and household goods and hopes to get away to his new field some time this week. He sold one of his houses a few weeks ago to Irving Gilliam and this week sold the residence in which he lived to C. E. Winer.

Mr. Buford came here from Iron county in February, 1907, where he had been teaching school. He had taught school for sixteen years in nearby counties, but decided he wanted a change of business. Immediately after taking up the Prudential work he sprung into favor with his employers by his excellent record in writing and collecting insurance. For years he stood well toward the head of the list of agents in the United States and carried off some of the most valuable prizes ever offered by the Company for special efforts. On one occasion he won an $80 prize, and in numerous contests won the prizes. He carries a very fine watch which was won in one of the contests. Mr. Buford has been a hard worker and stands well with his company.

Besides being a good insurance agent he has been a valuable citizen. He has been an earnest and faithful worker in the local Baptist Church and has always been a man who stood for moral principles and religious convictions. He and his good wife and son, Adelbert, will be missed from this community.

He and his family left Friday morning in their car for Columbus and expect to make the trip in about three days.

The S. E. Mo. Products Show.

On October 27, 28, 29 and 30, there will be held at the State Normal School the 3d Annual Products Show. At this show each county competes for cash prizes in field, orchard, timber and geological products. The prizes are so arranged that it is possible for a county to win $100.00 and as there are five premiums in each class, every county stands a good chance of winning something.

In addition to the county premiums, big prizes are offered individuals for exhibits of anything grown or made in S. E. Mo.

The Corn Show, formerly held in January, will be held with the Products Show. Three other big meetings will be going on in Cape Girardeau at the same time. They are the S. E. Mo. and N. E. Ark. Highways Association, the S. E. Mo. Woman's Federation of Clubs, and the S. E. Mo. Teachers' Association.

Write for premium lists. Plan to be in Cape Girardeau October 27, 28, 29 and 30. SETH BARCOCK, Cape Girardeau, Mo.
